More deaths to come?

The execution of Jean Charles de Menezes in London by armed police might be just the first of many more to come. We have learned that the City of London police Chief Dr James Hart has paid an official visit to Israel to attend a conference organised by the Institute for Counter Terrorism where he met Israel's top policeman Moshe Kadari. Obviously impressed with what he saw and heard, Dr Hart commented "we would be neglectful in our duty if we didn't make sure that we followed best practice for keeping people safe. Israel's security forces have a lot of experience in dealing with counter-terrorism".

What he didn't say was Israeli security forces regularly shoot innocent civilians. On his return to London Dr Hart hopes to establish an ongoing liaison between London Bobbies and their Israeli counterparts.

A Benefit to Britain?

A few weeks ago the national media prominently carried a sensational story that nineteen prostitutes of Eastern European origin were "freed" by a police raid from their "sexual slavery" in a Birmingham massage parlour. Now the publicity has been achieved the truth is beginning to emerge. Despite six of the girls had entered the country illegally in the back of a lorry, deportation orders against them have been "shelved for the foreseeable future". The remaining thirteen girls admitted coming to Britain voluntarily to work in the sex trade. They have been given "exceptional leave to remain" in Britain. So now New Labour is "pimping for Britain".

A recipe for resentment

Flooding a country with people from a different ethnic or cultural background is one certain way of generating resentment from the native population towards the newcomers. Giving them free housing, healthcare, food and other benefits only serves to exacerbate the situation. But when a government discriminates against its own people in favour of asylum seekers and other benefit claimants then trouble is sure to occur.

Such an example is that of the government department, the Benefits Agency, who made a mistake with its tax credit system and overpaid many claimants by a total of £4 billion. In an effort to recover the money the agency have cut the monthly benefit to British claimants, the most vulnerable in our society, and single parents and the elderly are facing reductions in their monthly income by up to £90 a month. Yet, the politicians have decided not to pursue foreigners who have been wrongly paid "as it would be too difficult". Coincidentally, just after this decision became public, the Home Office reported that "race-hate" attacks had increased dramatically. Is it any wonder?

Government admit one out of every 100 people living in Britain today is an ILLEGAL IMMIGRANT

During the General election, Prime Minister Blair was asked in a televised interview, how many illegal immigrants were living in Britain. With his re-election campaign in progress Blair claimed that it was impossible to estimate. Now, with Blair safely back in Downing Street, the Home Office has admitted that an estimated 570,000 illegal immigrants are living in Britain today. Yes, the Government admits that one person in every 100 is an illegal immigrant!

Even these figures will be widely out of date. To get their estimate the Home Office used details gleaned from census figures that are four years old. Also, to make matters worse, the formula used is only accurate if every illegal immigrant declared themselves on the 2001 census form, an extremely unlikely event!

But, based on these figures, and on the massive amount of illegal immigration that Britain has faced over the past four years no one from the Home Office is willing to dismiss speculation that there are in the region of 1.2 million illegal immigrants in Britain today. One person in every 50, two people in every hundred. You only have to open your eyes to see the changing face of Britain!

Additional figures supplied by the Home Office reveal that 3.6 million people who completed their census forms stated they were born overseas. These figures equal six percent of the population or six people in every 100. Add to this the official estimated number of illegals plus, the 772, 000 Asylum seekers awaiting a decision on their final status and you end up with the staggering figure of just under 5 million people, so yes, the government admit that almost 10% of the British population, four years ago, were not born in this country. Now factor in the increase in illegal immigration and Asylum seekers over the past four years and the figures creep up to over 5 million, which translated, means that one person in every ten in Britain today is a foreigner! And still they deny that we are being swamped!

One of the promises Blair and his accomplices made during the election campaign just last May was to speed up the removal of failed asylum seekers and illegal immigrants if they were re-elected. In June, just one month after New Labour were re-elected, the immigration service admitted that in one week they had managed to deport just 199 illegals. At that rate it will take this government 40 years to deport all the illegal immigrants currently in our country!

To make matters worse, although 199 illegals are being deported each week, 500 new applications for asylum are being made each week. Therefore 300 more potential immigrants arrive in Britain each week than leave!

AMNESTY ON ITS WAY?

Faced with a battle that it has no ideological interest in winning the Labour government is now edging towards an amnesty for all failed asylum seekers and illegal immigrants. New proposals to be adopted in this session of parliament will include plans to allow asylum seekers to take employment while they wait to be given permission to stay in Britain. Once the illegal immigrants are employed they will then be granted "exceptional leave to remain". Five years later they can apply for British citizenship and bring their "dependant family members" to live in Britain as well!

THE "RIGHT OF RETURN" TO BE ENDED

Although the government obviously cannot contain illegal immigration, it is taking measures to restrict legal entry into Britain. One of the measures being planned is to stop the "right of return" currently enjoyed by Britons who previously emigrated to other countries. At present, Britons who emigrated to for example, Rhodesia, Canada or Australia can return almost unrestricted to their homeland. This right also applies to their immediate descendants provided both grandparents were born in Britain. This group amounts to approximately 5000 entrants a year and they are almost exclusively white. But, new proposals being considered by the Home Secretary will end this right of return and despite their undoubted links to Britain, future applicants will have to join the queue of prospective immigrants along with those from Asia and the third world with no ancestral links here.

Irving Arrest Sparks Protest Campaign

The eminent British historian and author, David Irving has been arrested by Austrian police and charged with "hate crimes". London-based Mr Irving was on a one day visit to Vienna when he was arrested by armed police after stopping at a motorway service stop.

It would appear that in 1989, Mr Irving is alleged to have breached Austria's draconian "Holocaust denial" laws while giving a talk to students and now faces trial in the Austrian capital. The trial is set for February.

News of the arrest sparked a protest campaign by British and European nationalists. In Britain the campaign was advertised on their excellent website by the Nationalist Alliance who also produced some eye-catching posters (pictured left).

The British People's Party also used their website to pass on news updates from ourselves and others.

Members of the November 9th Society took to the streets of London on a bitterly cold Saturday and spent a large part of the afternoon picketing the Austrian Embassy. During the demonstration N9S pickets handed out draft letters of protest to be sent to the Austrian Foreign Secretary Jack Straw and the Austrian Ambassador. These had been provided as a comradely gesture by the Nationalist Alliance.

NA Fights to overcome split

Following the decision of three members of the NA Council to leave and establish a new party it was feared by many that the Nationalist Alliance would not survive the split, but survive they have, and now go from strength to strength. The party are clearly determined to build links with other nationalist groups and have already held joint demonstrations with local units of the National Front.

NEWS AROUND BRITAIN

ELECTION BOOST FOR NATIONALIST CANDIDATES

In an unholy alliance, the Conservative Party and extreme left elements in the Labour Party has vowed to block a proposed change in the Election Administration Bill which would reduce the amount of votes needed to retain a deposit from 5% down to 2%.

Currently, candidates standing in a General Election have to put forward a deposit of £500 which is forfeited if they fail to gain a minimum of 5% of the total votes cast in their chosen constituency. Opponents to the bill are using the British National Party as an example of how the proposed change could affect the smaller political parties. If the changes had been in place at the last General Election of May 2005 the BNP would have saved over £36,000 in lost deposits it is claimed, enough to finance an extra 73 candidates. Assisting the BNP to stand more candidates is not the government's motive behind the proposed changes, but the first move towards continental style state-funding of political parties which would free New Labour from the control of the trade unions who currently help to finance the party.

JEWISH "MILITIA" ACCUSED OF INFLATING "RACIST ATTACK" FIGURES.

The Community Security Trust (CST) has been accused of exaggerating the number of anti-Semitic incidents in Britain, therefore causing paranoia within the Jewish community. The accusations were made by the former head of the, Institute for Jewish Policy Research, Anthony Lerman and Rabbi Hershel Gluck during a BBC radio programme "A War Against Prejudice" which investigated the activities of the CST. The programme presenter, Gerry Northam described the CST as having thousands of volunteers trained in combat and intelligence and guards Jewish events, properties and persons. Despite allegations that the CST is an arm of the Israeli secret service, Mossad, CST Director Mike Whine denied his organisation worked with any group other than the police. Under questioning from Mr Northam, Whine refused to deny that the CST operated "undercover agents".

The existence of the CST is unique in Britain. Publicly unaccountable Combat trained volunteers working solely for the minority Jewish community, could be interpreted as a Jewish Militia or Para-military group, and as such would normally be illegal in Britain.

WHITES BLAMED FOR DESECRATION OF MUSLIM GRAVES

The recent rioting in Birmingham involving Blacks and Asians was sparked by allegations that a gang of Asian youths had gang-raped a 14 year-old Jamaican girl. Immediately following the riots a number of Muslim gravestones were damaged in the city's Handsworth Cemetery. Leaflets calling for the "Death of Muslim rapists" were left close to the damaged graves. The leaflets were attributed to a group calling itself "Black Nation". Despite a fairly open and shut case the local Labour MP, Khalid Mahmood, blamed the desecration on "members of the far-right from outside Birmingham in an attempt to stir up racial unrest". Youths from the local Black and Asian communities had just spent days trying to kill each other and yet Whites become the scapegoats.

BRITISH NATIONALISTS JAILED

Five alleged members of the White nationalist group the Racial Volunteer Force (RVF) have been jailed under Britain's draconian race laws. The five pleaded guilty to conspiring to publish a magazine, "Stormer" which the Judge said was intended to stir up racial hatred. Other charges related to articles on the RVF's website and the sale of a Screwdriver music DVD entitled "Live in Germany".

In what seems an extremely contradictory statement, the Judge, Jeremy Roberts told the five nationalists that "no one is being sentenced for their political beliefs ... this is a free country"

Footnote:

"Der Sturmer" translates to "Stormer" in English, and has not been a lucky title for those who have used it. Julius Striecher, the originator, was hanged by the allies after the war, and at least two users of the English version of the title since the war, have been jailed under race laws.

And this is a "free country"?

BNP EURO CANDIDATE "NOT GUILTY"

Matthew Single, a BNP Euro election candidate was found not guilty of assaulting an anti-Fascist after a Judge declared the anti-Fascist's evidence "was not reliable". Mr Single had been charged with threatening and abusive behaviour following a BNP meeting in his Southend, Essex constituency. After the meeting, several anti-Fascists attacked BNP members and Mr Single was assaulted. Police arrested Mr Single as he chased his attacker with the intent of making a citizen's arrest. Although both men were arrested only Mr Single was charged.

EUROPE IN FLAMES

As multiculturalism collapses

Proof, if needed, that the multicultural experiment that has come close to destroying Europe is now in meltdown was ably demonstrated by a series of race riots in Britain, France, Denmark and Germany recently.

In Birmingham, West Midlands, gangs of Afro Caribbean's and Asians rioted after rumours that a 14 year-old Jamaican girl had been raped by a gang of Asians. Over three nights cars and shops were burned or looted and a total of 12 people shot including a police officer. Several White residents caught between the two ethnic groups were also attacked. Almost 40 people were hospitalised including five suffering from stab wounds. One man died of his wounds.

Within days of race riots erupting in Birmingham, the French capital, Paris also faced some of the worst race riots for almost a decade.

The Paris suburb of Clichy-sous-Bois saw the first of the riots after two North African youths were accidentally electrocuted whilst hiding from the police in an electricity sub-station. Within hours of the news of the accident hundreds of Black and Arab youths took to the streets rioting and looting. Shops and cars were set alight and whites living in the mainly immigrant area became targets for sporadic violence. When the police finally arrived they were immediately attacked with bottles and bricks, and at one stage a shot was fired at the officers. At the height of the trouble police officials admitted that they had considered calling in the army to help quell the rioters. The riots continued for almost 3 weeks with cars and property being torched by the rioters. Shots were also fired at fire fighters trying to douse the flames and again police officers also became targets for gunmen. Over this period riots were staged throughout France, as far as Lille in the north and Marseilles in the South. Only in two respects were the riots consistent, arson attacks were a core feature and the rioters were mainly Black and Arab youths. Despite plenty of tough talking the French government rejected a call from Front National leader, Jean Marie le Pen to declare a national state of emergency and allow the army to intervene in the streets. The FN also demanded that those convicted of violence should be deported to their ethnic homeland. One FN spokesman was quoted as saying "if they don't like France then let's see how they like life back in a dusty village in Algeria".

While the rioting in France attracted much of the media cover, the Arhus, the second largest city in Denmark was also suffering its worst race riots for many years. Over several nights Muslim rioters with their ethnic roots in Turkey, Lebanon and Somalia battled with Danish riot police. The riot followed the well established pattern of arson and looting. Police were attacked by non-White rioters chanting "this land belongs to us". Whites unlucky enough to be in the wrong place at the wrong time were attacked and beaten by the mob and a private house was firebombed. The offices of a local newspaper the, Jyllands Post, which had been editorially critical of crime rates amongst immigrants was also attacked.

Copycat attacks were launched in Germany, and Belgian police discovered leaflets being distributed in immigrant areas of Brussels urging young Belgian Muslims to join their French coreligionists in rioting against the White authorities.

In the Netherlands shots were fired at the office of the Dutch Immigration Minister, Rita Verdonk. Ms Verdonk, who is spearheading much tougher laws to prevent the Netherlands from becoming a dumping ground for third-world immigrants, was unhurt in the attack. The shooting incident came just one year after a prominent Dutch filmmaker Theo van Gogh was murdered by an immigrant upset by a van Gogh film which was viewed as being "anti-Islamic".

In almost all cases the excuse used by Muslim "community" leaders was that their youth were disaffected, excluded and discriminated against, and that taking to the streets was the only way they could bring attention to their plight. Predictably, in almost all cases governments promised more taxpayers money for immigrant areas and legislation to promote various forms of affirmative action or positive discrimination to ensure that non-whites will get favourable treatment in the quest for jobs.

In surrendering to the thugs, European governments have sent out a clear signal that they are willing to capitulate to ethnic violence, a policy that will surely fan the flames of ethnic and religious hatred for decades to come!

Anthony Sawoniuk

VILLAIN or VICTIM?

Just a couple of weeks prior to Yuletide a colleague advised us of the sad death of Anthony Sawoniuk, the only man ever to have been convicted in Britain of "war crimes".

In 1991, after massive lobbying by predominantly Jewish groups such as the Holocaust Educational Trust, the Thatcher government introduced the War Crimes Act. This gave for the first time the opportunity to try people in Britain for crimes committed in another country during wartime by people who were not British citizens at the time.

The Simon Wiesenthal Centre provided just 17 names of suspects to the police and the Soviet Communist government supplied almost 400.

The Metropolitan police established a special "war crimes" unit and decided to investigate just 376 alleged war criminals said to be living in Britain. The unit quickly discovered that in over a third of these cases the suspects were already dead. In many more the suspects were either too ill to be interviewed or were suffering from memory loss caused by advanced age or Alzheimer's disease. Another large group of suspects were cleared when it was discovered that the allegations were maliciously made by the Soviet authorities. Eventually papers relating to just ten cases were referred to the Crown Prosecution Service.

In 1996 the first man to be charged under the new act, now popularly known as "the Jewish law of revenge", was Szymon Serafinowicz an 86 year-old retired carpenter from Dorking, Surrey. Mr Serafinowicz had served in the police in his native Belarus during the war and was alleged to have killed three unknown Jews. Even with the sparsest of evidence the authorities were determined to drag this ill old man through the courts. The case collapsed almost immediately when the Judge ruled that Mr Serafinowicz was unfit to stand trial as he was suffering from Alzheimer's disease. He died just seven months later.

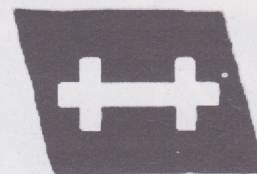

Thus deprived of their revenge the "war crimes enthusiasts" demanded another show trial and this time it was Anthony Sawoniuk who was chosen as the sacrifice.

Mr Sawoniuk was a frail, partly deaf 78 year-old former railway worker living in Bermondsey, South London. The Metropolitan police and the CPS spent £5.4 million in bringing him to trial at the Old Bailey in 1997.

At the trial the prosecution laid four charges of murder against Mr Sawoniuk but two charges were almost immediately dismissed by the Judge because of lack of evidence. The remaining two charges related to allegations that in 1942, while serving in a local police battalion he murdered two unnamed Jewish women in the Belarus village of Domachevo. Anthony Sawoniuk denied the charges and elected to conduct his own defence. The prosecution had only one witness, seventy-five year old Fedor Zan who was paid to travel from Domachevo to Britain to give evidence. The trial lasted for eight weeks during which the jury were flown to Belarus to visit the site of the alleged murders. Throughout the trial Mr Sawoniuk claimed that he had been framed by a vengeful Soviet government. But what were the facts?

Certainly the Soviets had a motive for wanting revenge on Anthony Sawoniuk. In 1941 German forces had liberated Domachevo from Soviet Communist occupation. Sawoniuk, like hundreds of other Belarus patriots joined local German organised police battalions and took part in fierce battles against Communist partisans. He freely admitted fighting and occasionally killing the enemy, who were attempting to disrupt newly liberated Belarus. In fact it was Communist partisans that murdered his wife Anna in a terrorist attack in 1943. In 1944, he left the police to join the 30th Waffen SS Division "Belarus" (collar patch pictured below) and fought with some distinction in Italy. At the end of the war Anthony Sawoniuk learned that survivors from the Belarus SS were being handed over to the Soviet authorities for execution or a slow death in a Russian prison camp. So posing as a Polish soldier he arrived in Britain in mid 1945 and was classified as a "displaced person".

Eventually he married, had children and Grandchildren and settled into a peaceful regime working as a ticket collector for British Rail.

In 1951, he made what for him was to be a fatal mistake. He wrote to his brother, who was now living in Communist occupied Poland. What he did not know was that all letters arriving from the West were routinely vetted by the Russian secret service, the KGB. After questioning his brother in their usual ruthless manner the KGB learned of Anthony Sawoniuk's wartime anti-Communist activities and when the opportunity came to present a list of wanted "war criminals" to the British authorities, Anthony Sawoniuk's name was prominent. The Russians would have their revenge!

The jury chose to reject Mr Sawoniuk's claim that the only witness Fedor Zan was lying on the orders of the KGB and he was sentenced to life imprisonment. A sentence, for a man of that advanced age, would obviously be a sentence of death.

Was Anthony Sawoniuk a murderous villain as claimed by the prosecution or was he a patriot who fought for the freedom of his people and his beloved Belarus from the Communist yoke who ultimately became a victim of Soviet revenge? We may never know.

Bert Eriksson

Just after the last issue of League Sentinel had been sent to the printers we received news of the death of a dear Comrade, Bert Eriksson. We did manage to insert an In Memoriam notice into the issue but because of limited space we were unable to do justice to this wonderful man. Now we have the chance to redress the omission and pay tribute to the life of Albert (Bert) Eriksson.

Albert Armand Eriksson was born on the 30th of June 1931 in the Flemish city of Antwerp to a Finnish father and a Flemish mother. While still at school he joined the struggle for an independent Flanders and was sympathetic to the German aspiration of a New Europa. Claims that he joined the Hitler Youth were never confirmed or denied. After the war over 500,000 Flemish nationalists were persecuted and vilified by the left-wing puppet government appointed by the victorious allies. Three thousand were condemned to death and tens of thousands were either jailed, fined or had property confiscated. Classed as "collaborators" they were denied jobs in the state sector and were neither allowed to stand for public office nor allowed to vote. Their crime? They wanted their freedom and independence, the basic right of every human being. The young Albert Eriksson vowed to fight against the persecutions and injustice. But first, in 1951 at the age of 20, Bert Eriksson had to do his national service and chose to enlist in the elite Para-Commandos. A fervent anti-Communist, Eriksson volunteered to fight in Korea. The lessons he learned during his service, those values of self-discipline and comradeship were to remain with him for the rest of his life and would shape his whole character. Flemish politics were at this time dominated by two organisations, Vlaamse Concentratie (Flemish Concentration) which was led by Karel Dillen, later to become the President of the modern day, Vlaams Blok, and the more extreme, Vlaamse Militanten Organisatie, led by Bob Maes. After the end of his national service Bert Eriksson joined in the political campaign for AMNESTIE for those Flemings being persecuted by the state. He campaigned vigorously and had several brushes with the law. In 1971, tired of the endless infighting between the various nationalist groups Eriksson launched the Vlaamse Militanten Orde (VMO). From the start the VMO was designed to be different. Instead of the "talking shop" approach used by other groups, Eriksson believed in "direct action". Membership of the VMO was strictly vetted and members were expected to be fit, brave and extremely self-disciplined. The group was organised on the European nationalist "Leadership principle" and dissenters were invited to comply or to leave. Military-type weekend camps were held regularly as Eriksson viewed this type of activity essential for building discipline, fitness, and comradeship amongst the membership. The very nature of the VMO meant they would often be on a collision course with the Belgian state and demonstrations often turned into violent clashes with the state police. Also, being pro-nationalists and anti-communist every VMO protest drew opposition from the extreme-left. Even when heavily outnumbered the VMO refused to walk away, and it during this period that Bert Eriksson demonstrated his leadership abilities. He was a fearless street-fighter and a brilliant tactical planner. Most Britons first came into contact with Bert Eriksson at the annual "Pilgrimage to the Ijzer" held in the picturesque Flemish village of Diksmuide. The Pilgrimage is an extremely sacred day for the Flemish people and a way of showing defiance to the Belgian state. Diksmuide was also at the centre of the the centre of the AMNESTIE campaign and the VMO used the event as a show of strength and opposition to the state authorities. On the morning of the holy day, the VMO, in full uniform, marched the length of the high street in full view of the assembled media, and in total defiance of the Belgian state. On many occasions Eriksson made a point of inviting other sympathetic European groups, including the League of St George, to take part in the march thus allowing all to demonstrate our European unity, and support for the Flemish cause. Bert Eriksson also pioneered the idea of joint wreath laying at the war cemeteries of all of the European nations involved in the two world wars. The covenant, "No More Brother's Wars" could not have been more graphically demonstrated than the sight of British and French nationalists laying wreaths on the tombs of German wartime enemies. The Germans in turn laid their wreaths on the tombstones of their former wartime enemies, with buglers from the VMO (pictured above) sounding the Last Post. This spirit of European Comradeship made the event unique.

Bert Eriksson

† 1931 - † 2005

Bert Eriksson also had an enormous talent for generating media attention and irritating the Belgian government at the same time. A prime example of this was "Operation Brevier".

Cyriel Verschaeve was a Flemish priest and intellectual who had been an active Flemish nationalist for much of his adult life. During WW2, Verschaeve, in common with most Flemings supported the Germanic New Order in its attempt to create a European Nation of which Flanders, not Belgium would be a participant. He travelled widely throughout Europe during this period and found himself at the end of the war in the Austrian Tyrol. Cyriel Verschaeve died in Austria in 1949 and was buried there, far from his beloved Flanders. Over the years representations were made to the Belgian government to allow Verschaeve's body to be moved back to his Flemish homeland but each request was denied. Then in 1973, a specially trained VMO "commando" unit led by Bert Eriksson mounted "Operation Brevier". The VMO unit made their way secretly to the Austrian Tyrol and there amongst the mountains they exhumed the priest's body and carried it covertly across several national borders back to Flanders. With the first part of the operation completed successfully the VMO launched phase two of "Brevier". The national press and media were invited to a VMO press conference to "hear an important announcement". There, to their astonishment they were greeted with the sight of a highly polished coffin carrying the remains of Cyriel Verschaeve, bedecked with the Flemish flag and guarded by a uniformed Honour Guard provided by the VMO! A few days later, with much pomp and ceremony, the remains of the patriotic priest were laid to rest in the Flemish village of Alveringham. A few years later, in 1978, Eriksson and the VMO again attracted national attention when they mounted "Operation Delta" and arranged for the reburial of Staf De Clercq, the wartime leader of the Flemish national socialist movement in Flemish soil in Asse. But Bert Eriksson was not just a man of action; he was also a man of words and wise council. In 1978 Flemish nationalism was splintered into several groups. It was Eriksson who arranged talks between two of the main groups which led to the formation of the most powerful Flemish political party ever, Vlaams Blok. In 1983 the Belgian government banned the VMO, describing it as a "private militia". Eriksson retaliated by forming the "Odal Group" and continued his battle against the state. In 1998 the government finally surrendered to the campaign for AMNESTIE and full civil rights and state benefits were restored to all Flemish patriots.

Unfortunately Bert Eriksson, the Lion of Flanders has died before realising his dream of an independent nation. But, one day soon, Flanders will be free and the Flemish people will owe a massive debt to the bravery and dedication of Bert Eriksson.

Bert Eriksson: "De Leeuw van Vlaanderen"

Farewell Bert Old Comrade. For you the struggle is over, but the battle for a free and independent Flanders will continue until victory is achieved.

Three Quarters of a Million Germans Vote NPD in General Election

The recent General election in Germany resulted in a slightly improved vote for the Christian Democrats and a slightly decreased vote for the left-wing Social Democrats but the real victors in this snap election were the nationalist Nationaldemokratische Partei Deutschlands (NPD). Although they failed to gain any parliamentary seats they increased their vote nationally from just over 200,000 in 2002 to a staggering 750,000. Under the state finance system, where political parties receive funding direct from the state based on their electoral support, the NPD will receive almost £450,000 from the state fund. Despite only having a short time to campaign, the NPD made massive gains in Saxony, Brandenburg and Thuringia, all NPD targets in the regional elections next year.

Dozens of young Germans travelled to the Czech Republic to give support to a march organised by Czech nationalists to protest against Germany's decision to prosecute Ernst Zundel. Over 200 protesters marched through Prague to the German embassy and handed in a petition demanding the release of the historian.

LOS ANGELES: Earl Krugel, a senior member of the Jewish Defence League who was jailed for 20 years for his role in planning terrorist attacks on Arab owned properties has been murdered in prison. At his trial, just weeks before his murder, Krugel admitted the charges in a plea bargain offered by the authorities. Krugel also admitted to conspiracy to commit terrorist acts and illegally possessing weapons and explosives. Ironically, the militant Zionist should have shared the dock with fellow conspirator, Irv Rubin, but Rubin, the leader of the JDL had managed to escape justice by committing suicide while awaiting trial. Krugel had only been in the medium-security Phoenix Federal Correction Institute when a fellow inmate crushed his head with a cement building block.

According to FBI sources, Jewish Defence League members have been responsible for carrying out at least 40 terrorist acts since its formation in 1968 including the murder in 1985 of Arab-American, Alex Odeh who was killed when a bomb exploded as he entered his office.

US defence specialist admits spying for Israel

ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA: Larry Franklin, a defence analyst working at the Pentagon has pleaded guilty to spying for the state of Israel.

Franklin made his admission to the Federal Court in Alexandria, Virginia where he is facing three charges related to the passing of secret information to two former members of the pro-Israeli lobby group AIPAC and an unnamed Israeli diplomat working as a political officer at the Israeli embassy in Washington DC.

Facing up to 10 years in prison, Franklin is expected to agree to give evidence against the two former AIPAC employees when their trial begins in January in the hope of receiving a more lenient sentence. This prospect has led to claims that Franklin's life could now be in danger, fearing assassination by agents of the Israeli state.

NEW SOUTH WALES: Jewish community leaders are demanding that Holocaust education be made compulsory in all schools in the State. The NSW Jewish Board of Deputies have told the State government that many schools do not include Holocaust studies in their curriculum and this could lead to pupils being denied "a valuable lesson in racism".

Germany

BERLIN: Gerard Menuhin, the son of the world famous classical violinist Yehudi Menuhin has been sacked from his post as head of the German branch of the Yehudi Menuhin Foundation after he publicly criticised Jewish co-religionists as being part of "a Jewish conspiracy that pressurises Germany by dwelling on the country's sense of war guilt".

Some Jewish groups are now calling for the prosecution of Menuhin Junior under Germany's draconian "hate laws".

Prussian Blue Invited to Tour Australia

Australian multi-culturalists are threatening a campaign of disruption if the White Nationalist pop duo Prussian Blue accept an invite to tour Australia. The duo, 13 year-old twin sisters from Bakersfield, California is hated by multiracial extremists because of their proud to be White approach to life. The girls, Lamb and Lynx Gaede, are both talented instrumentalists as well as vocalists; try to promote their love of their race through their attractive music. "We are proud to be White and we want our people to stay White" said the girls in a recent interview and their music reflects this.

Lamb near the Lane was written especially for the girls by political prisoner, David Lane and Aryan Man Awake written by the girls mother April Gaede, have been two of their biggest hits to date. The twins speak to Lane, who first coined the 14 Words slogan, regularly by telephone in his prison cell, and count on him as a friend. The Lamb and Lynx have been educated largely at home by their parents and have an incredibly adult view of life for their tender ages. Hostile television interviewers have found this at their cost. The vastly experienced BBC interviewer, Louis Theroux was completely flummoxed by the girls forceful and uncompromising rejection of multiracialism when he interviewed them on television last year.

If the girls accept the invitation to tour Australia it will be a major victory for White culture as their folksy music has the potential to attract thousands of new fans to the cause of White Pride. Two British nationalist groups are believed to be looking for financial backers to help fund a tour of the UK later next year.

"Prussian Blue" have their own website at www.prussianblue.net.

Australian youths fight back against immigrant violence

After months of suffering immigrant violence, white Australian youths took to the streets in an explosion of anger, shocking the left-wing government and media. The violence exploded after a gang of North African immigrants attacked and badly assaulted two white life-guards who banned them from playing football on a busy family beach just outside Sydney. This was the spark that ignited almost a week of rioting by white youths targeting immigrants and their property. The whites claimed that gangs of North Africans regularly come to Cronulla Beach to ogle and make lewd suggestions to white females. Complaints had been ignored by "politically correct" police officers and the whites decided to demonstrate their anger in the most direct manner. At one stage 5000 white teenagers, including a large number of girls rampaged through immigrant areas close to the beach destroying immigrant's cars and shops and assaulting the occupants. Immigrant gangs gathered in a local Mosque and after arming themselves with guns and iron bars attacked and firebombed a church, and fired several shots at the white protestors. Colleagues in Australia told League Sentinel, "Most of the immigrants are Muslims and they see very little female flesh exposed in their environment, so they go to the beaches and make obscene suggestions to bikini-clad white girls. They refer to the girls as Aussie sluts. We have had enough". Four immigrants are currently awaiting trial for gang-raping white girls in the locality.

Germer Rudolf deported to German prison

Germer Rudolf, the chemistry expert who following extensive research publicly disputed the use of cyanide gas allegedly used to kill prisoners at the Auschwitz labour camp during the war, has been deported from the United States. Mr Rudolf, a chemistry graduate of Bonn University now faces a 14 month prison sentence in Germany awarded in 1995 for "Holocaust denial". Rudolf had sought political asylum in the US claiming his rights of free speech were denied him in his native Germany. Despite having a wife and child, both of whom are US citizens, his appeal against the deportation was rejected by the US Supreme Court.. Mr Rudolf was immediately arrested by German political police on his arrival at Frankfurt airport.

His acclaimed, "Expert Report on the Formation and Detectability of Cyanide Compounds in the Gas Chambers of Auschwitz" also known as "The Rudolf Report" concluded that "no mass gassings with hydrogen cyanide took place in the wartime detention centre at Auschwitz".

Arthur Kenneth Chesterton

Our last issue carried an advertisement for the AK Chesterton Memorial Archives that were being sold by Steven Books. This generated several letters from readers asking for more information on this fascinating man.

Arthur Kenneth Chesterton was born in England in 1896 and was a cousin of the famous author G.K. Chesterton. Whilst still a small boy AK's family moved to South Africa. Little is known about his childhood but it is known that on the outbreak of the First World War AK volunteered to serve King and Empire in the Durban Light Infantry where he won the Military Cross for bravery. In the late 1920s Chesterton returned to England where it is believed he worked as a journalist.

In 1933 he entered politics by joining Sir Oswald Mosley in the British Union of Fascists. He served Mosley both in the Publicity and Propaganda department as well as being a District Inspector in the Midlands. In 1935, whilst still in the BUF, Chesterton also joined the pro-Nazi, Nordic League. Some historians believe that this affiliation prompted his eventual split with Mosley but this was evidently not the case as Chesterton published in 1937 a glowing biography of Mosley entitled "Portrait of a Leader". As war clouds gathered over Britain in 1938, AK did split with Mosley, leaving the BUF to join William Joyce and John Becket in the newly formed National Socialist League. In the early part of 1939, Chesterton, it is believed, also joined the secretive Right Club formed by his old colleague from the Nordic League, Conservative MP Archibald Ramsay. Other members of the Right Club included William Joyce, Francis Yeats-Brown and Joan Miller an infiltrator working for British Intelligence section MI5. It has never been clear whether Miller acted alone, or was acting under the orders of her shadowy MI5 boss Maxwell Knight, in tipping off certain members of the Right Club that they were to be arrested at the outbreak of war, but certainly Joyce (pictured right) and Chesterton were told that they were on a list, and Joyce fled to Germany whilst Chesterton returned to South Africa. Subsequently, Joan Miller went on to provide much of the evidence that led to the arrests of Ramsay and Admiral Sir Barry Domville. Miller also provided the evidence that convicted Tyler Kent, a US citizen working in the American Embassy in London, who was sentenced to seven years imprisonment for being a "Nazi sympathiser". Chesterton claimed that during the war years he "served the Empire" in East Africa, but now in his early forties it would be hard to believe that he saw any active military service. Apparently forgiven by the often had their ego's rapidly deflated by a barrage of flour bombs aimed at them by League members.

In 1967 A.K. Chesterton co-founded the National Front and became its first leader. Many of his former colleagues from the Right Club and the Nordic League joined the NF and distinguished names such as Squadron Leader Harrison-Broadley, and Admiral Sir Barry Domville graced the ruling directorate. During this period, AK spent several months every year in South Africa, and it was during one of these absences that he was democratically replaced as leader. Quite what AK was doing during these trips is unclear but rumours were circulating that he was helping the Rhodesian government of Ian Smith to overcome the sanctions imposed on that country after it had declared UDI from Britain. When asked about these rumours, even by friends, AK just smiled, and refused to confirm or deny his activities.

Despite his disillusionment over losing the leadership of the National Front, AK maintained his political interest by founding and editing Candour magazine. He died on the 16th of August 1973 aged 77.

A.K. Chesterton was one of life's gentlemen. Although a radical in his youth, who according to colleagues of the time was able to deliver a devastating right-hook to opponents when attacked, AK never advocated the use of violence against political opponents. Better to embarrass or humiliate them than to beat them physically was his philosophy.

The face of British politics has changed dramatically since the days of A.K. Chesterton. Today, media advisers and spin-doctors plot publicity campaigns. But no spin-doctor can conjure up the same visual effectiveness as a bag of flour liberally applied to a political opponent, and it was such fun!

This Prime Source Study Pack comprises of three booklets published by the LEL in the early 1950s. In them Chesterton examines the decline of the British Empire and the role in its demise of New York based money power. He also examines the growth of world communism.

The pack will enable students of politics to better understand the events leading to Britain's historic decline as a world power.

Israel's Dirty War Continues

Israel has long been criticised by much of the International Community over its poor record on human rights. State sponsored murder of political opponents, the shoot to kill policy aimed at innocent civilians, mass arrests and torture are all part of the Israeli armoury used regularly against the Palestinian people. But now a new sinister tactic is being employed against civilians living in occupied Palestine ... Sonic Booms!

The Israeli secret service Mossad has the dubious honour of being credited with developing the use of high-pitched loud noise as a method of torture and now the Israeli airforce are using similar tactics to terrorise innocent Palestinian civilians.

The new tactic is brilliantly simple, Israeli F16 fighter jets, (pictured above) thoughtfully provided by the US taxpayer as a weapon of "defence", are flown low over Palestinian homes at supersonic speeds which create a sonic boom as they break through the sound barrier. This simple but effective tactic is devastatingly efficient in terrorising the civilian population.

Families and children in particular, think that the Israelis are launching an air strike against them and cower in terror waiting for the bombs or missiles to strike; they cannot tell if the planes are going to fire on them until the attack is over. Since this new form of terror was introduced, miscarriages have increased by 40% in the immediate aftermath of the low-level flights. The flights often take place in daylight as children are going to school, leaving the children nervous and unable to concentrate for the rest of the day.

Damage to property by the sonic booms can also be considerable. The United Nations Relief Agency building in Gaza was a victim of a supersonic over flight, 350 windows in the building shattered, as did the toughened glass doors.

Now the UNRA has joined Human Rights campaigners in launching a legal case against the Israeli Ministry of Defence in a bid to stop the terror attacks and gain compensation for its victims, but the World's number one terrorist organisation, the Israeli Defence Force, remains unrepentant.

Hamis executes Israeli spy

The militant Palestinian group, Hamas have claimed responsibility for the killing of an Israeli citizen Sasson Nuriel, whose body was found, dumped on waste ground just outside Ramallah. Hamas claimed that Nuriel a self employed sweet manufacturer living in the nearby Jewish settlement of Maaleh Adumin was a spy working for the Israeli Secret Service, Shin Bet.

Nuriel was initially kidnapped to be used as a bargaining tool to be exchanged for Hamas prisoners imprisoned by Israel, but under interrogation he confessed to being a Shin Bet secret agent and was executed for spying.

Israel seeks exemption from prosecution for alleged war criminals

Officials from the Israeli embassy in London have held talks with British officials to seek assurances that Israelis visiting Britain will not face war crimes charges.

The meeting, held with officials from both the Foreign Office and the Lord Chancellor's office was at the request of Israeli diplomats concerned over a possible repeat of an incident last September when a former General in the Israeli Defence Force visiting London was tipped off that British police were waiting to arrest him at Heathrow airport. Who authorised the tip off is still unclear. The retired General, Doron Almog did not disembark at Heathrow but stayed on the aircraft and returned to Israel. The former head of the IDF's Southern Command is wanted in connection with alleged breaches of the Geneva Convention (war crimes) while he was the officer in command of occupied Gaza. Since this incident no current or former members of the Israeli occupation forces has dared to risk visiting Britain.

Israeli officials also sought assurances that senior politicians including their current Prime Minister Ariel Sharon who also served in the IDF would not be arrested on any official visit to Britain.

A Foreign Office source has revealed that Israel has threatened Britain that it would view the arrest of any of their personnel as "a serious diplomatic incident".

Members of the Israeli Defence Force are alleged to have committed war crimes in occupied Gaza.

NEWS UPDATE   Special Supplement

A Victory for Common Sense!

Within days of Issue 67 going to the printers, exciting news came from Leeds Crown Court that the “BNP two”, Nick Griffin and Mark Collett had been cleared of several charges of inciting racial hatred. This victory was not just a victory for Nick Griffin and Mark Collett, and not just a victory for the BNP and its superb legal team, it was a victory for all Britons who care about freedom of speech and freedom of expression.

The case came about after a reporter, Jason Glynne, funded with BBC licence-payer's money, successfully infiltrated the BNP in West Yorkshire and secretly filmed speeches by Griffin and Collett at several private meetings. During the two-week trial the BNP leader made it clear that he hated only the politicians that had betrayed Britain and its people by allowing unrestricted immigration into the country. The speeches, given to an invited audience, were “a political rallying cry to party members and potential supporters rather than an incitement to any kind of hatred”, Mr Griffin told the jury. Mr Griffin's lawyer, Tim King QC, told the court that the BNP was a legally registered political party which had achieved some success in local elections and the “BNP two” were simply putting forward their party's legitimate ideas and policies as was their right in a democratic society.

The prosecution tactic of trying to snare the two defendants into admitting that they were inciting hatred against Asians failed badly when the two continuously condemned the Muslim religion, but not those who practice it.

Phil Davies, the Conservative MP for nearby Shipley, West Yorkshire criticised the prosecution for bringing the case claiming it gave the BNP the “oxygen of publicity” after previous cases of a similar nature had already illustrated the difficulty of gaining a conviction. The MP was also quoted as saying that such court cases made the BNP “seem like martyrs” and can be “counter-productive”. A spokesman for the Muslim Council of Britain also conceded that this type of prosecution “was very difficult to obtain convictions”. Despite these warnings a spokesman for the taxpayer-funded Crown Prosecution Service announced that they would be seeking a retrial on the charges that the jury had failed to reach a decision on.

While this was a tremendous victory for the “BNP two” we must not forget that originally there were three defendants scheduled to stand trial, but sadly the third defendant, BNP founder, John Tyndall died before the trial and the defendants subsequent acquittal. The final words on this case must be left to Lee Barnes of the BNP legal team.

“Today we in Britain won a great victory over the forces of decay and stagnation that have almost destroyed our great nation and people. The lesson we as British and European nationalists can all learn from the court case of Nick Griffin and Mark Collett is that nationalists, when united, can defeat any and all of the forces that confront us. Let the flame that has been kindled in Britain shine forth, and let it light our way to victory”!

EUROPE: Get Off Your Knees!

The reaction of Muslims around the world to several innocent cartoons making light of the Muslim Prophet Mohammad should be a stark warning to Europe. Their intolerance to the traditions of freedom of the press, the swift resorting to violence to emphasise their protests is something that European governments must tackle without delay.

The cartoons, first published last year in a Danish daily newspaper the Jyllands-Posten generated the most abject display of cowardice by European governments ever seen. As Danish embassies throughout the Middle-East were torched by Muslim demonstrators the cowardly Danish Foreign Minister summoned foreign envoys to Copenhagen to "apologise on behalf of the Danish people". In France the managing editor of the popular France Soir newspaper was sacked from his post after the paper reprinted the cartoons. While the European Union offices in Gaza were being burned to the ground an EU spokesman called for "restraint". Not one European government acted in defence of our freedoms. Even Europe's so-called friends deserted it in its hour of need. The President of Afghanistan, Hamid Karzai, whose corrupt regime is only kept in power by the armed forces of the West, demanded that "an act like this must never be allowed to be repeated". The President of Turkey, a country begging to be admitted to EU membership condemned the European tradition of press freedom and called for tighter restrictions to be imposed. And our European leaders grovelled in the dust.

Denmark should have immediately closed the embassies of all the countries that had failed to defend Danish property, and expelled their ambassadors and embassy staff. In every European country that faced violent demonstrations there should have been mass arrests and mass deportations to Saudi Arabia and Afghanistan, where satirical humour is banned. European troops should have immediately been withdrawn from Muslim countries where they are risking their lives as peacekeepers, and Turkey should have been told that there is no place in the EU for Turkish intolerance. The Islamic faith does not respond to weakness, and Europe should get off of its knees and demonstrate that it will defend itself against any and all attacks on its freedoms.
